

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Introduction	1
---------------------	---

PART 1

Protecting parliamentary law. Conflicts among the powers of the State

CHAPTER 1

The Italian Constitution and parliamentary law: a difficult, complex and unresolved relation

1. Framing the issue	11
2. Old and new interpretations of article 64, first paragraph, of the Constitution	16
2.1. Persistent insider views	16
2.2. The semi-collapse of the old paradigm	23
2.3. A source of law in a free zone	32
2.4. A competence-reserved source of law	35
2.5. Non-written parliamentary law in constitutional case laws	40
2.6. Constitutional case laws as integrative source of parliamentary law	42
2.7. The individual role of the President of each House guaranteeing parliamentary law within Parliament itself	49
2.8. Political self-protection of parliamentary law	55
2.9. Parliamentary law and the President of the Republic	59
2.10. Parliamentary law and the Constitutional Court (referral)	64
2.11. Parliamentary law and doctrine's subsidiary role	65
3. Parliamentary law and the Constitution	67
4. Constitution and Parliament aging through the years.	69
5. Conclusions: two stabilized unsolved issues and new parliamentary rules	73

CHAPTER 2

Conflicts among powers of the State

1. A rigid Constitution and conflicts among the powers of the State	85
2. Objective prerequisites: an outline	96
3. Individual prerequisites: legitimacy to stand, legitimacy to resist	98

CHAPTER 3

Conflicts of authority among the powers of the State and Parliament

1. Parliament's individual features in conflicts among the powers of the State	105
2. Legitimacy of each House	112
3. Legitimacy of the Parliament meeting in joint session	118
4. Legitimacy of the President of each House	119
5. Legitimacy of other "minor" committees	121
6. Legitimacy of parliamentary Groups	123
7. Legitimacy of individual MPs	128
8. Legitimacy of minority and opposition Groups: a few starting points	140

PART 2

Legitimacy of individual MPs

CHAPTER 1

Constitutional Court Ordinance No. 17/2019

1. An "innovative" and "experimental" interpretation of the Constitutional Court	143
2. The first issue: passive legitimacy	147
3. The second issue: active individual legitimacy	151
4. "An issue dismissed without prejudice": a long-lasting phase	158
5. The third issue: inadmissibility based on objective requirements	166
6. The so-called "turbo" major modification concerning finance acts	174
7. A looking-ahead ordinance	184

CHAPTER 2

The present pioneering phase

1. Aftershocks	197
2. Conflicts over unrelated provisions: the "twin" ordinances of 2019	202
3. Budget law: ordinance No. 60 of 2020	205
4. The everlasting flaws in legislative procedures: ordinances No. 197 of 2020, No. 80 and No. 151 of 2022	210
5. Matters of framing: ordinances No. 86, No. 129 and No. 176 of 2020	213
6. Forcing the "vault" of the Presidential admissibility judgment: ordinances No. 186, No. 188 and No. 193 of 2021	220
7. Pandemic emergency and parliamentary work: ordinances No. 255 and No. 256 of 2021, ordinances No. 15 and No. 212 del 2022	227

8. Emergency regime and alleged takeover of the legislative action: ordinances No. 66 and No. 67 of 2021 235
9. “Napoleon can wait”: ordinance No. 154 of 2022 on interferences in the lawmaker’s field 239

CHAPTER 3

Multi-individual Parliament

1. The Parliament “one and biune” 249
2. The fleeting season of joint Collegiate bodies 253
3. The molecular structure of the Parliament 264
4. Brief conclusive remarks 270

Bibliography 279

Abstract 293